BIOGRAPHIES OF CORE RESEARCH TEAM

Lead institution: European Studies Centre, University of Oxford

Matthew Eagleton–Pierce

Matthew Eagleton–Pierce is a DPhil candidate in International Relations at the University of Oxford. His primary research interests are centred on three areas: (1) the theoretical examination of power and legitimacy in the multilateral trading regime with a focus on constructing a concept of symbolic power to explain why certain ideas in trade policy become stabilised and legitimised; (2) an analysis of Southern–led agriculture coalitions in the WTO, particularly the African cotton case and the G33 collective; (3) the post–war history of the trading system. He has worked at the Global Economic Governance Programme at Oxford as a Research Officer, participating in the Global Trade Governance Project and administrating other projects and initiatives. He was the founding editor of an Oxford graduate–run academic journal of international affairs, the St Antony’s International Review, editing the first three issues which focused on global cooperation, human security, and the international politics of oil. He holds an MPhil in International Relations from the University of Oxford and was awarded a First Class BA in Geography from King’s College London.

Mehmet Karli

Mehmet Karli is a DPhil candidate in International Law at the University of Oxford. His doctoral research focuses on the compatibility of EU's free trade agreements with the relevant WTO disciplines on regional trade arrangements. His research interests are: (1) multi–level rule making in international economic governance through WTO and Regional Trade Agreements; (2) Developing countries in WTO, GSP schemes and SDT; (3) WTO Dispute Settlement with particular reference to remedies; (4) Accountability of WTO Dispute Settlement System; (5) Relationship between international economic law and general international law; (6) European Common Commercial Policy; and (7) Turkey–EC Customs Union and Turkey's accession process to the EU. He holds an MPhil in Law and an MJur in European and Comparative Law from the University of Oxford, and an LL.B. from the Galatasaray University in Istanbul, Turkey.

Kalypso Nicolaïdis

Dr Kalypso Nicolaïdis is the Director of the European Studies Centre and University Lecturer in International Relations at the University of Oxford. She is a Fellow at St Antony's College. Dr Nicolaïdis teaches in European integration, international relations, international political economy and game theory. In the academic year 2004–2005, she was Vincent Wright Chair at Sciences–Po, Paris (2004–2005). Previously she was Associate Professor at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government and taught at the Ecole Nationale d'Administration in Paris. At Harvard she was the founder and chair of the Kokkalis Programme on Southeast Europe. At Oxford she is co-chair of the South East European Studies at Oxford (SEESOX) which runs, inter alia, the Greek–Turkish Network. Dr Nicolaïdis has published widely on international trade and global governance, including the analysis of EU trade policy, services, and mutual recognition. She has collaborated with Robert Howse on understanding the sources of legitimacy and ethics in the trading regime, publishing several articles and co-editing The Federal Vision: Legitimacy and Levels of Governance in the US and the EU (Oxford University Press, 2001). She has also published on the EU constitutional debate, EU relations with Turkey and EuroMed, issues of identity, justice and cooperation in the international system, as well as preventive diplomacy and dispute resolution. Journals in which her work has appeared include Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, The Journal of Common Market Studies, Journal of European Public Policy and International Organization. In addition, she has co-edited a volume titled Whose Europe? National Models and the Constitution of the European Union. Dr Nicolaïdis has been an advisor to several governments, political parties and international organisations, including George Papandreou on European affairs, the French socialist party, the European Commission, UNCTAD and the OECD. She holds a PhD in Political Economy and Government from Harvard University, a Master in Public Administration from the Kennedy School of Government, a Master in International Economics and a Diplome from the Institut d'Etudes Politiques in Paris.

Sophie Meunier

Sophie Meunier is Research Scholar in the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University. She is the author of Trading Voices: The European Union in International Commercial Negotiations (Princeton University Press, 2005) and its French adaptation, L'Union fait la force: l'Europe dans les negociations commerciales internationales (Presses de Sciences Po, 2005). She is the co-author of The French Challenge: Adapting to Globalization (with Philip Gordon, Brookings Institution Press, 2001) and its French adaptation Le Nouveau defi francais: la France face a la mondialisation, winner of the 2002 France–Ameriques book award. She is also the editor of Making History: European Integration and Institutional Change at Fifty (with Kathleen McNamara, Oxford University Press, 2007). Meunier has published many articles on the European Union, the politics of international trade, globalization, and French politics in journals such as International Organization, Foreign Affairs, and Foreign Policy. Her current research focuses on anti-Americanism in France, the ambiguous links between Europeanization and globalization, and the politics of international regime complexity. She is currently writing a book manuscript on the politics of French anti-Americanism and another book on the paradox of 'managed globalization'. Meunier is an elected member of the Executive Committee of the European Union Studies Association (2003–2007) and Secretary of this association. She is an elected Term Member of the Council on Foreign Relations (2004–2009). She is the chair of the Council of European Studies' thematic network on globalization and is a member of the Advisory Board of the journal French Politics. Meunier contributes frequently to the French media. She holds a BA from the Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (1989) and a PhD from MIT (1998).

Amrita Narlikar

Dr Amrita Narlikar is University Lecturer in International Relations at the Centre of International Studies (CIS), University of Cambridge. She has been teaching at graduate and undergraduate levels since 1999 and is the Course Provider for International Political Economy at the CIS. Prior to taking up her position in Cambridge, Dr Narlikar held a permanent lectureship at the University of Exeter and was a Junior Research Fellow at St John's College, University of Oxford. She held a visiting position at Yale University in 2002, and was awarded a position of Visiting Professor at the University of Brasilia in 2007 (declined). Her research interests are concentrated on international political economy, international organisation, negotiation analysis, and emerging powers in international regimes. She has recently been awarded the Mellon/CRASSH Teaching Fellowship 2008–09 (with Professor Martin Daunton). In 2003, Dr Narlikar was awarded a Nuffield Foundation Fellowship to conduct research on a three-year project, jointly with Professor Andrew Hurrell (University of Oxford), on emerging powers. Based on this research, she is currently completing a book entitled Pathways to Power: Brazil and India in International Regimes. Besides the Nuffield project, she is working on another book, The Crisis of Global Governance, and continues to write about international economic organizations, trade negotiations, and developing countries. She edits (with Dr Jochen Prantl, University of Oxford) a recently launched book series with Brill, 'Studies in International Institutional Dynamics'. She is also co-writer and Secretariat member of the Warwick Commission on Reform of the Multilateral Trading System. She holds a DPhil (PhD) in International Relations from the University of Oxford.
